399 Adjournment

The Chairman adjourned the meeting to allow public discussion. Representations were made regarding the planning and retrospective application for Treburgett Piggery. Despite assurance from Cornwall Council that controls would be in place after the last applications problems appear to have got worse, with smell and flies, and the building appeared bigger than expected. There were concerns over the health of the pigs and the footpath had disappeared along with the signs. Mr Shute from the Piggery said that the new buildings were to replace almost derelict substandard buildings and new methods were in place to deal with slurry which should control the smell and flies. The animal welfare complies with legislation and inspection and has regular checks. Mr Raybould advised that a Planning Officer had visited Victoria Cottages again (385) and had measured the building. The meeting was reconvened.
